

Cut the mini-dialogues into strips. Give to students. Tell the doctors to find patients to talk to, and patients to find doctors. It can be helpful to print the doctor and patients strips on different color paper.

Student A: Doctor

You are a doctor. Find a patient to talk to. Ask the questions.
When you finish, switch papers.

Patient:

Doctor: He'll be fine. Give him this medicine.

Patient:

Doctor: Give him 1 tablespoon twice a day.

Student A: Doctor

You are a doctor. Find a patient to talk to. Ask the questions.
When you finish, switch papers.

Patient:

Doctor: He has the flu.

Patient:

Doctor: Keep him in bed and give him a lot to drink.

Student A: Doctor

You are a doctor. Find a patient to talk to. Ask the questions.
When you finish, switch papers.

Patient:

Doctor: He has a bad cough. Give him this medicine.

Patient:

Doctor: Take 1 tablespoon every four hours.

Student A: Doctor

You are a doctor. Find a patient to talk to. Ask the questions.
When you finish, switch papers.

Patient:

Doctor: Don't worry. Keep him in bed for 2-3 days, and give him this for pain.

Patient:

Doctor: He can take 2 tablets twice a day. He'll feel better soon.

Student B: Patient

You are a patient. Find a doctor to talk to. Ask the questions.

When you finish, switch papers.

Patient: Doctor, how is my son?

Doctor:

Patient: How much do I give him?

Doctor:

Student B: Patient

You are a patient. Find a doctor to talk to. Ask the questions.

When you finish, switch papers.

Patient: How is my son, doctor?

Doctor:

Patient: What can I do for him?

Doctor:

Student B: Patient

You are a patient. Find a doctor to talk to. Ask the questions.

When you finish, switch papers.

Patient: What do you think doctor?

Doctor:

Patient: How often does he take it?

Doctor:

Student B: Patient

You are a patient. Find a doctor to talk to. Ask the questions.

When you finish, switch papers.

Patient: How is my brother, doctor?

Doctor:

Patient: How much?

Doctor: