

Scrambled Paragraph

The vizir knew nothing about the power of the Genie.
So the next morning Aladdin walked into the palace with forty richly dressed servants.
Each servant carried a large golden bowl filled with jewels.
The king could not now say no, and Aladdin and the princess were married.
Only one more thing was needed--a palace to live in.
Again Aladdin called the Genie.
That night a new palace rose up beside the king's palace.
There Aladdin and his princess lived in great happiness.
But this happiness did not last very long.
